Some Culinary Uses of Silver Leaves (Varakh)

- Silver foil, or varakh, as it is generally known in India, adds glitter to Indian sweets (mithai), supari (betel nut), paan (betel-leaf) and fruits.
- Besides being very decorative it is reputed to have an aphrodisiac effect.
- Edible Silver Leaves brings the art of gilding to all celebrations and festivities.
- Varakh is also used as a topping in many Indian sweet dishes such as Kheer, Saffron flavored milk, etc.
- It is often added to champagne, fine baked goods, candies, and a holiday cake creates exquisite desserts and memorable dining experiences.

Silver is well known for its bacterial properties, and its use in Ayurvedic products is mandatory. Traditionally, silver foils are being made in India by primitive manually beating silver pieces between intestines of animals obtained from slaughterhouses. This leads to several Indian religious communities banning use of silver leaves. With the availability of BABA Silver Leaves, this concern has been addressed and people can now enjoy 100% vegetarian & satvik silver leaves without any hesitation.
